REVIEW

We live in a divided world where we encounter violence, persecution, poverty, racial hatred, corruption, and yet, at the same time, we see efforts for peace and involvement in upholding human dignity and fundamental freedoms.

This duality helps us to better observe the struggle between good and evil, between truth and falsehood, between despair and hope. If we would not have a biblical and prophetic perspective during the times in which we live, it would be easy to slip into discouragement. It would be just as easy to go in the wrong direction with expectations that cannot be achieved in this constantly changing world.

2020 in Review presents a selection of news headlines, and reports on the general direction which nations follow when relating to human rights, the humanitarian area, and international relations as they are seen by the United Nations.

The most crucial issues the world faced in 2020 were actively discussed at the United Nations. The issues in question being the Covid-19 pandemic, violations of human rights, privacy infringements, the limitation of religious freedom, racism, discrimination, the challenges of the world economy, food insecurity, and many others. According to the World Bank, the pandemic has harmed the poor and vulnerable the most, and it is threatening to push millions more into poverty. At the height of the COVID lockdown, more than 160 countries had mandated some form of school closures for at least 1.5 billion children and youth. The pandemic may add between 83 and 132 million people to the total number of undernourished in the world in 2020, according to a preliminary assessment by the UN Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO).

Despite all the negative news, we can still place in a positive context many things that happened in 2020. Plenty of positive reactions can be seen as an answer to certain negative situations that have occurred this past year. This type of positive attitude has been a helpful ally for many people that went through these difficult experiences. Although a long list of accomplishments can be created on the topic of human innovation as a response to adversity, I will limit this description to a few of them that can be considered relevant from the human rights perspective. It has been considered that violent conflicts have declined and humanity has become more tolerant. Innovations in certain fields such as medicine have increased in a very short time. Socially speaking, people have shown their good side more than before by engaging in voluntary activities, co-operating, and providing humanitarian, spiritual, and emotional support to those that need it more than they do. Although public religious manifestations have been restricted in most countries, the strong belief that God is still in control and will not abandon mankind must overcome any feelings of fear or insecurity.

*"Nations are in uproar, kingdoms fall; He lifts His voice, the earth melts.
The Lord Almighty is with us; the God of Jacob is our fortress."*

Psalm 46:6-7 - NIV
